

MOORE UNABLE TO PROVE COX CHARGES

You have subpoenaed Mr. Bloomer and Mr. Woodford from Cleveland, and I think they will tell you something you ought to know."

Senator Spencer: "If they do, I am glad."

Mr. Moore: "All the men that I have suggested are either paid servants of the Republican National Committee or else they are State chairmen, and if you want to find out how much they have raised in a given State you have got to subpoena these men."

Mr. Moore rattled off another list of men who ought to be subpoenaed. One was Edmund Silverhead, employee of the Republican National Committee operating in Youngstown.

"Never heard of him," said Treasurer Upham.

Moore insisted that these men were the paid money raisers and could tell what they had received and the quotas.

Senator Spencer: "Have you any information as to the testimony of these gentlemen will give, except the fact that they are connected with the National Committee and you assume they will give us some facts?"

Mr. Moore: "Nothing except what I have heard, Senator."

Senator Spencer: "Where did you hear it, what is the source of your information?"

Mr. Moore: "Silverhead, for instance, was in our town, in Youngstown, and when he left he told the clerk of the Ohio Hotel, Montgomery, holding up a check of $100. This is the way to get the money."

Youngstown for the last three weeks."

Relies on Hotel Clerk.

Senator Spencer: "That is the source of your information about Mr. Silverhead?"

Mr. Moore: "Certainly."

Again the state Senators had a tilt among themselves. Senator Reed, taking the side of Mr. Moore, blazed:

"If any one wants to suppress any evidence by building tactics, keep it up."

But Mr. Moore agreed with Senator Spencer that he was not being bulldozed.

Later Spencer said it was difficult to be serious with Mr. Moore. Mr. Moore replied:

"I still insist that what information I may have obtained can be obtained by anybody who is an investigator of facts, that what an investigator of facts would know, and I don't care to tell."

Then came this colloquy:

Senator Reed: "I don't believe in bringing a witness in and bullying him."

Senator Spencer: "Did I bully you, Mr. Moore?"

Mr. Moore: "No. If you like it, I am sure I do."

Chairman Kenyon: "Let us get beyond this Damon and Pythias by-play; set down to brass tacks."

They asked Mr. Moore for more names. From his inexhaustible supply he drew forth that of Frank J. Ruffier, who he said was the "Cincinnati representative" raising the funds for that district.

He also offered the report that had come to him that Harry N. Blair, the "chief paid agent," was getting a salary of $15,000.

He declared that Bert Fuller was raising the money in Indiana, and was a personal friend of Will Hays.

Mr. Moore announced that he would have more information every day. He was "getting communications by every mail."

He insisted the quotas for the Twelfth Congress District of Indiana was fixed at $75,000 and of Noble county alone at $8,000.

"Where did you get this from?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"I am taking this from memoranda furnished by a gentleman of the highest repute and who tells me that—Walter Bonham."

Everybody had to laugh by this time. Mr. Moore, indignant, said: "I was trying to answer you before. Walter S. Bonham and the Treasurer of Noble county, and the County Auditor of that county, and Arthur Briggs of Ligonier, the Republican candidate for Judge of the Thirty-third Judicial district of Indiana, were present at this meeting at which the quotas for Noble county were fixed at $9,000, and they were informed that the quota for the district was $75,000."

Senator Spencer: "So as far as you know, this gentleman of high repute did not tell you that he had raised any thing?"

Mr. Moore: "No. I cannot say how much was raised."

Senator Spencer: "Where are you reading from—where did you get that information?"

Published in Newspapers.

Mr. Moore: "I have already told you that Chicago's quota was $70,000, and was published in the newspapers, and you have the men right here at your door that can tell you about it."

Mr. Moore's next revelation was that the quota for the State of Washington was $224,000.

"I got that," he said, "from a series of telegrams of the same character from the State of Washington, and I am advised that in the possession of W. L. Morgan of Hoquiam, Wash., there is documentary proof in the shape of a letter from Samuel A. Walker, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee."

Chairman Kenyon: "As I understand you, then you expected to present these telegrams to-morrow and the next day and the next day?"

Mr. Moore: "Not unless you want them, Senator."

Chairman Kenyon: "I am asking you if this is the evidence you have in mind, answers to your telegrams?"

Mr. Moore: "I did not say that I had the evidence. You asked me if I could give you leads, and I said I would be getting fresh leads."

Chairman Kenyon: "The fresh leads are replies to telegrams which you have sent?"

Mr. Moore: "Some of them are and some of them are not."

He said if the "paid money diggers" got on the stand and lied he would direct their prosecution "in my own way."

Chairman Kenyon: "You must realize that this committee can't very well subpoena men from California, Arizona or New Mexico on telegrams that come from the Democratic committee."

Mr. Moore: "No, but if this man is here with a letter, and this fellow denies it, and he is willing to come, you would subpoena him if you thought it important, wouldn't you?"

No Prior Evidence.

Senator Spencer: "You come representing the distinguished Governor."

Now, you have no evidence that existed before he made his statement, but you sent telegrams all over the country in the hopes of getting some evidence that may sustain what he has previously charged."

Mr. Moore: "If you will read Gov. Cox's speech it presents the evidence."

Senator Spencer: "Every one of these telegrams of yours is dated long after he made his statement. You are seeking information which, if it is true, we are glad to get, but it does not answer the purpose."

Mr. Moore: "You should not criticize me for endeavoring to get some evidence for you."

Senator Spencer: "I am not criticizing you."

Mr. Moore: "You apparently are. Perhaps I mistake your attitude and your language."

Senator Spencer: "Your telegram states Seattle's quota is $80,000."

Mr. Moore: "Yes, $80,000."

Chairman Kenyon: "Gov. Cox's statement gave it as $100,000."

Mr. Moore: "Yes, whenever he has any corrections it is evident there have been changes."

Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City, a manufacturer of burned clay and chairman of the Republican party and means committee for Missouri, was one of the first witnesses to enlighten the Kenyon body as to exactly how the plan works in the States. He said he got his instructions from Treasurer Upham and William Boyce Thompson, chairman of the national ways and means committee. Hays was to name the State chairmen, under whom there should be a chairman for each Congress district. There was also a regional director, W. A. Kling. Each county was reached by a sub-committee.

Senator Reed did most of the questioning of Mr. Dickey about the affairs of the Senator's home State. Mr. Dickey denied that any quota was set for Missouri, but said he had some knowledge of the Missouri Republicans were to endeavor to raise $80,000 for the National Committee, with a suggestion of $10,000 for State purposes, or $100,000 in all. The State Committee was still at liberty to go on and raise its own money. He knew the State couldn't get along with $10,000.

As far as the limit is concerned the contributors make that limit," he observed. He denied vehemently that certain districts or cities, such as St. Louis, had been assessed certain sums. About $17,000 was raised up to September 1, this including contributions before and after the National Convention. There were two or three contributions of $2,000, he said, that amount being the highest. Before the convention a man subscribed $1,000, but died before he could pay it. Adding the amount paid in and the unpaid pledges the total raised and promised to date was $100,000.

Senator Reed, with the Cox charges and Mr. Moore's testimony in mind, tried hard to get Mr. Dickey to admit he had ever heard of district quotas, but the witness said he hadn't.

"Did you ever see a statement from Mr. Hughes of Macon, Mo., that a rough budget of $500,000 was fixed?" Senator Reed asked.

"No, sir."

Chairman Kenyon: "Do you think you could use $100,000 in the Missouri campaign in perfectly legitimate ways?"

Mr. Dickey: "I know that you could, because I did it in 1918 and the people of voting age now are doubled by the admission of women to the polls."

While Mr. Dickey was testifying Senator Pomeroy fingered a typewritten sheet which the Republican Senators finally insisted on having him read in full. It was a copy of a circular letter headed: "Republican National Committee, Treasurer's Office, 245 Conway Building, Chicago, Ill., campaign plan, larger cities."

Gov. Cox has quoted parts of it. The part that interested Senator Pomeroy referred to the formation and plans of a local executive committee in each city. The circular said:

"In any case it is absolutely necessary first of all to sell to this committee the quota and the campaign plan. Prospect list. The most we want in a financial campaign is a complete list free from duplication of all prospective donors. In a city the size of St. Louis, Cleveland or Detroit, a complete list of at least 3,000 names."

"Bear in mind that the amounts placed on the prospect list should not be the minimum you expect to get but the maximum you expect to ask for."

"All cards of the largest prospects should be turned over to the executive committee to handle. Use the adding machine to find the total amount of estimates on all cards."

"If the estimating has been intelligently done 40 per cent. of the total, exclusive of the prospects turned over to the executive committee, will probably be secured."

"A special prospect list in the hands of the executive committee should result in at least 25 per cent. of the total estimated amount assigned to that committee."

"Assigning prospects, all the cards of special prospect have been reserved for the executive committee. The remaining cards should be submitted to the division chairman and they in turn should make selection of approximately twenty-five cards each for what might be termed a 'cream list,' to be distributed as a favor to the team captain."

"You may not be able to realize the exact amounts but the equivalent should be secured."

"Note that this list has no dollar sign or anything else on it to indicate what is referred to. Therefore you may safely place a copy of this memorandum in the hands of the chairman and every member of the executive committee."

"List of team captain and workers. As a convenience for the use as well as for the use of the chairman, each team captain and his worker should be listed with his business address and telephone number."

"Do not print instructions! No instructions to team captains or workers should be printed, as care must be used that nothing is left on tables at luncheons or dinners that might fall into the hands of anyone that might give publicity to such material."

"Active assistance to campaign manager. One live wire local man widely acquainted with business leaders and politicians, having also a knowledge as to the subscribing ability of men in the community, should be assigned as an assistant to the campaign manager. He should be pledged to serve the campaign manager whenever he is called upon."

Dated June 4, 1920, form No. 101, and signed

"HARRY M. BLAIR"

Circular Not Accepted.

From his chair at the side of the room National Treasurer Upham arose to say that this circular was never adopted and that he had in his hands the telegrams to prove that fact. The committee said it would hear him later.

Mr. Dickey was excused after testifying that the quota of $250,000 assigned to St. Louis by Gov. Cox or any other quota had never existed, so far as he knew, and he said he could not know. He said no set sum had been fixed for St. Louis. He denied also that Kansas City had been assessed for $50,000, but said it ought to raise that sum.

Smallpox Warning Issued.

Twenty cases of smallpox have been reported in the city within the last sixty days, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, announced yesterday. He said that this figure is about normal, but that there is necessarily for vaccination of every child entering school, and all other persons who have not been vaccinated in eight or ten years should undergo inoculation. Dr. Copeland issued a reminder also that influenza is likely to break out again, but estimated that its effect will not become general until after Christmas.
